Cyprus, year 2000.

A postwar generation. Like other postwar generations in Germany, Northern Ireland, South Africa and the Middle East. Stigmatized by their country's long unresolved political situations...

A dividing line entrenched in their country by military force, dividing it in two since they were born. The memories that lie beyond the line. These are their unwitnessed memories.

A social documentation drawing a psychological profile of this generation who, for the very first time, voice their fears and hopes, dreams and nightmares.

Eight selected interviewees unfold the truth behind the "reality bites" of their everyday lives and the remnants of a war they have never witnessed. Eight different stories... a common denominator...
